Part II: Reading Comprehension

Read the following two texts carefully.

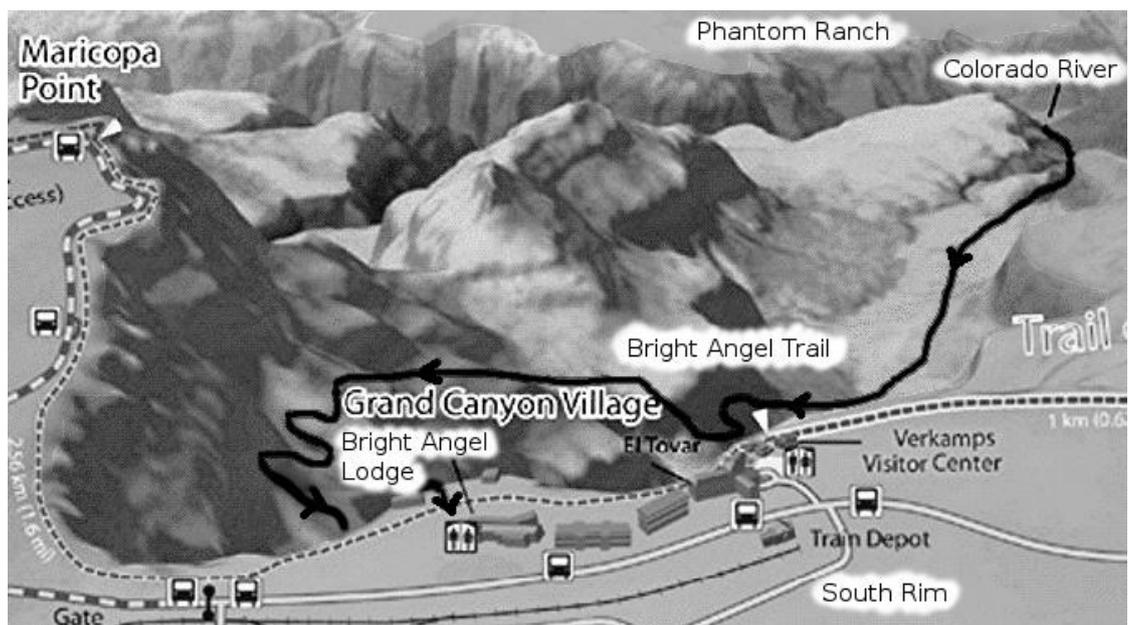

TEXT 1:

Man Collapses and Dies on Bright Angel Trail

Grand Canyon, AZ. A 28-year-old man collapsed and died on the Bright Angel Trail yesterday at around 5:00 p.m. Avik Chakravarty from England and a hiking companion started a rim to river to rim hike yesterday at 7:30 a.m. The two started their hike on the South Kaibab Trail and had hiked to Phantom Ranch near the Colorado River. At Phantom Ranch they talked with a National Park Ranger and were advised not to begin their hike to the rim until later in the evening due to the extreme temperatures. The temperature at Phantom Ranch in the shade yesterday was 113 degrees.

Despite the advice, by mid to late-afternoon yesterday the two hikers had begun hiking back to the South Rim. They were three miles north of Phantom Ranch when Mr. Chakravarty collapsed. His hiking partner then hiked up to Indian Garden, which is located two miles north of where Chakravarty collapsed, to report the incident. He arrived at 5:30 p.m. National Park Rangers arrived on scene at approximately 6:00 p.m. Mr. Chakravarty had already died.

Park Rangers suspect Mr. Chakravarty died from heat-related illness. “This is a tragic reminder that a rim to river to rim hike in the middle of summer when temperatures are well above 100 degrees in the inner canyon, can be extremely dangerous”, stated Ivan Kassovic, an Inner Canyon Ranger. He added, “the hike the two had planned was about 17 miles.” The National Park Service (NPS) strongly discourages such hikes during the summer when temperatures are extreme. Yesterday, a thermometer inside the rescue helicopter logged a temperature of 120 degrees at 6:00 p.m. near the recovery site. To avoid trouble, the NPS suggests planning your hike well before starting, hiking during the cooler times of the day, eating salty foods and drinking water or sports drinks.

TEXT 2: Grand Canyon National Park – Trip Planning/Visitor Information

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A GREAT HIKE OR A TRIP TO THE HOSPITAL IS UP TO YOU!

Plan Ahead

Before you go, plan ahead. You are entirely on your own. Everyone who hikes in the canyon for the first time reports that it was more difficult than they expected. Don't hike alone! Don't overestimate yourself. Hike intelligently. You are responsible for your own safety and that of everyone in your party.

Be a Lightweight

Travel as light as possible. The heaviest things in your pack should be your food and water. Bring a small flashlight and a change of batteries. Wear sunscreen, sunglasses, and a hat. Bring a map, compass, signal mirror, and water purification tablets. Stay on the trail.

Be Kind to Yourself

If you have asthma, heart problems, diabetes, knee, back or any other health or medical problem, please limit your exertion and especially your exposure to the heat. Please stay within your training, physical limitations, abilities, and do not attempt to go to the river and back in one day!

Take a Break

A break of five to seven minutes can remove 20% to 30% of the waste products that have built up in your legs while hiking. Sit down and prop your legs up above the level of your heart. Take this kind of serious break at least every hour. Eat some food, drink some fluids, and take time to really enjoy the view. In the long run, these breaks will not slow you down.

No Food, No Fuel, No Fun

Eat and drink more than you normally do. Eat before, during, and after you hike. Eat before you are hungry. Drink water before you are thirsty. No matter what the temperature, you need water and energy to keep going. Keeping yourself cool and hiking the canyon takes a very large amount of energy (food). Salty snacks and water or sports drinks should be part of any hike. Food is your body's primary source of fuel and salts (electrolytes) while hiking in the canyon. Your best defense against illness and exhaustion is to eat a healthy breakfast, a snack every time you take a drink, and a full dinner at the end of the day. This is not a time to diet.
