The ketchup story

Everybody knows it. People say it's a kid's food but almost everybody likes ketchup these days. Each person has about 1.5 litres of ketchup per year. You can put it on hot dogs, burgers, potatoes or even on your ice cream.

Only a few people know how to make it – it is a big secret. We just know it is a red sauce, which nowadays is made of fresh tomatoes. It also contains sugar.

In the 1600s men on ships from Britain and Holland visited China and they found out about the nice sauce. Chinese cooks made it from fish. Back home in Europe the seamen tried to make the same sauce.

The name 'Ketchup' was first used in England in 1848. However, an American from Pennsylvania by the name of Henry J. Heinz was the first person who sold the sauce in glass bottles under the name of 'Ketchup'.

Today, ketchup is still popular in different countries around the world.
